

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS

15 ml Item No. 3539

Traditionally, Eucalyptus species have been used for supporting feeling of good breathing and to soothe muscles after exercise. The Australian Aborigines used the leaves for soothing physical and emotional discomfort. With over 700 species of eucalyptus, as well as chemotypes, common names and different parts of the plant being marketed, it is no wonder that people are so confused!

The uses of Eucalyptus essential oils are very vast and wide-ranging because there are so many species. This essential oil is extracted from the steam-distilled leaves of the large, aromatic eucalyptus trees of the Myrtaceae family sourced from Australia. Its bold, rich, and earthy aroma paints a summer day spent working in the garden.

BENEFITS AND FEATURES

- Fresh and earthy aroma promotes emotional well-being

- Promotes opening of the solar plexus and heart chakras
- Helps alleviate over exercised, sore, tension or stiff muscles due to exercise or everyday activities
- Supports feeling of good breathing
- Helps eliminate impurities by adding a few drops to facial cream

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS

PRODUCT BACKGROUND

Ancient Mayan use of the eucalyptus tree is not documented. However, the medicinal practices of the Mayan people are passed as oral tradition from one generation to the next, and eucalyptus is certainly used by today's Mayan healers. The Maya Health Toolkit for Medical Providers discusses the use of leaves from the eucalyptus tree. Unfortunately, this list does not name the botanical name of the eucalyptus used today. This list does note that modern-day Mayan healers use eucalyptus for skin infections, arthritis, bronchial infections, asthma, pneumonia, and lice infestations.

Again, we mention: Statements about ancient or current Mayan spiritual beliefs and medicinal practices are merely descriptive. No statement is intended as medical advice.
